Customer Reviews

Once again, Sandra Brown has outdid herself, with this captivating and well-written love story. After a many years of soul-searching and countless hours of pure research, Erin O'Shea can't hardly believe that she is about to meet her adoptive brother, Kenneth Lyman. Adopted herself as an infant, she is overwhelmed standing on his doorstep, suddenly anxious but ringing his doorbell, just the same. She keeps imagining what he must look like, is he tall or short, does he have her coloring, all these thought are going through her mind, when suddenly the door opens and she is confronted by one of the most handsomest men she ever laid eyes on. Is this him? He was very tall, in great shape with the most gorgeous blue eyes, in other words, he didn't look anything like her but she asked the question anyway. "Are you Kenneth Lyman?" When he nodded yes, she was so elated, finally she found her long-lost sibling. He let her come in, she sat down, to tell her story, and to answer all his questions. Showing no emotion at all, she was wondering why he was so cold to her?

That is why, she was so stunned, when he took her wrist, stood up, bringing her up with him, and shocked her by kissing her with the most passionate kiss she has ever experienced in her life. She was appalled that her own brother would kiss her like that and under no uncertain terms, she let him know it too. It was at that moment that Lawrence "Lance" Barrett, agent for the United States Department of Treasury, introduced himself. Her brother Kenneth, apparently, embezzled funds from the bank that he used to work at, fled and was in hiding. It was Erin's inopportune time to show up on her brother's doorstep and the handsome agent was treating Erin like a criminal as well.
